

In our country, most of the advertisement refer to companies that employ regardless of gender. But there are also cases when companies are looking for a certain gender to do the job.

The analysis of unemployment by gender shows us that employment for both men and women is almost equal, ie there is a small difference between the unemployment rate between men and women.

According to that analysis, we can see that the unemployment rate for men is lower than the unemployment rate for women.

Women are active in the labour market, but not sufficiently. The most common reason for this inactivity is unpaid housework and child care.

Jobs dominated by women

Preschool and kindergarten teachers

Fabric and apparel patternmakers

Hairdressers, hairstylists and cosmetologists

Secretaries and administrative assistants

Cashier

Bakers

Jobs dominated by men

Police

Firefighters

Truck driver

Developer

Electrician

Car mechanic

In our country there are companies that require only one particular gender. For example:

